

Friendly Hell-Raiser Pushes Home A Point

AN OLD PRO, civic and provincial representative Frank Hanley, wags an advising finger at a pair of McGill undergraduate politicians. Debating Union president, Morris Fish and Students' Society president

Roy Heenan were among Mr. Hanley's questioners yesterday when he arrived on the campus for a heart-to-heart talk about educational issues.

Committee On Education Backs President's Stand

McGill's Committee on Education yesterday expressed their unanimous approval of President Roy Heenan's stand against the proposed "march on Quebec". The latter manoeuvre was recently advocated by student editors at Laval and the University of Montreal.

All Quebec Universities Refuse Aid

The National Conference of Canadian Universities yesterday reported that all Quebec universities have returned their federal university grants.

As it stands now, the NCCU, who distributes money to the Federal Government, holds in trust for the universities in the province the amount of $17,000,000.

The grant is based on $1.50 per head of the population in Canada; it is then divided among the universities in each province in accordance with student enrolments in relation to the provincial population.

$1,648,600 AVAILABLE

For grants purposes, students in a course leading to a degree are considered to be enrolments. McGill has 6,598 in this category. The amount available to McGill was $1,648,600.

It was reported that the Presbyterian College of Montreal, affiliated with McGill, was accepting a grant of $5,497 this year. Moreover College Marie-de-France, a classical college and affiliated with the University of Paris, accepted $25,236. On the other hand, the University of Montreal stated last week that the grant amounting to $2,774,955.63 was to be refused.

The Committee on Education is a recently constituted body formed for the purpose of advising the Students' Society President on campus opinion with particular reference to education developments in Quebec. It consists of students active on campus and "competent to advise the President on such matters."

Heenan's stand was outlined in a press release to the Daily last night. The text read as follows:

"It is my opinion that this sort of action would be most ill-advised at this time. It might well destroy the favorable climate of opinion which has grown in support of the students and universities. Should any incident occur the student cause may well be set back for several years."

CONCENTRATED ACTION

"Rather than take hasty action on rather ill defined aims, I would like a concentrated, planned action—which might be long termed — with a specific and declared aim of forcing a solution of the government grants problem. The inability of the universities to accept both federal and provincial grants is to me the crux of the university problem. It is preferable to bring pressure on this, than to have a march on Quebec to express dissatisfaction with a bill which, in spite of its many weaknesses, does make concessions to the students."

The names of members of the Committee on Education were also released last night. They include (in alphabetical order)

"Chins Up" For Carnival Contest

Twenty bearded students (all male) will present their chins for inspection today at 1 pm in the Walter M. Stewart Room of the Union. The beard growing contest, to be judged by the five carnival princesses, is a preview event in the Twelfth Annual McGill Winter Carnival.

The Carnival gets under way this Thursday with a torch light parade up Mount Royal. Dr. F. Cyril James and other dignitaries will officially open the festivities, which include an ice show, fire works exhibition and finally dancing at the Chalet to Mike Dodman's Orchestra. This year's ice show will feature a broom-ball game between the Students' Councils of McGill and the University of Montreal, a tug of war between the east and west wings of R.V.C. and will conclude with a demonstration of jumping.

Activities on Friday include the opening of the Intercollegiate Debating Conference, the Intercollegiate ski meet and the Forum Ice Revue.

This Ice Revue starts at 7:15 pm with the annual competition for the Birks Trophy between the U of M and McGill hockey

MPP Hanley Visits Campus Considers McGill Deficit Mystifying

by LESLIE HALPERT

"Professors who are leaving the University of McGill to go elsewhere for higher salaries certainly are unpatriotic," stated MPP Frank Hanley in the Ballroom yesterday, at a meeting sponsored by the Debating Union.

The City Councillor and Member of the Quebec Legislative Assembly could not understand why this university is operating under a deficit even though its students pay the highest fees in Canada and its professors receive the lowest salaries.

"I am not the administrator of the university," he stated. "The Provincial government has no jurisdiction whatsoever concerning the salaries of professors... I cannot give you any answer why it is that there are high fees and low salaries."

"Popular education in this province, has been the achievement of the administration so diligently, so courageously, so generously, and so persistently steered in the ways of progress by Honourable Premier Duplessis. Let's give to Caesar, what truly belongs to him!"

To questions from the audience on the constitutionality of accepting federal grants, he said: "I would rather give an opinion of common sense than take an opinion of the courts."

Frank Hanley then advocated a planned economy for this country. By this he meant that the government and other public powers would endeavour to prevent and cure unemployment and unequal distributions of the basic means of life.

Athenaeum Staff Resigns In Protest

The twenty-two member staff of Acadia University's student newspaper with the exception of two abstainers, has resigned in protest of the action taken by the Students' Judicial Committee in dismissing the editor from his post.

As a result of the editor's printing an article by Robert Fiander, B.A. 4, the Judicial Committee recommended that Donald Angus, B.A. 4, resign his position as editor of the student newspaper, The Athenaeum.

FOUL BLASPHEMY

Fiander has since been expelled for writing the article which was labelled as "foul blasphemy" by Dr. W. Kirkconnell, university president. Following the latest action, that of the resignation of almost the entire staff of the newspaper, Dr. Kirkconnell announced the dissolution of the student committee. The committee's duties will now be handled by the university's Board of Governors, Dr. Kirkconnell said.

Learning From Plato

Every once in a while one comes to appreciate the wisdom and insight of those philosophic giants of early Greece. Plato and Aristotle, for example, have much to say which can be very well applied to our own lives and to the lives of those about us, even though these men lived and wrote thousands of years ago.

It seems, however, that it takes some sort of an occasion to make one think about what those men have said. Just such a situation arose yesterday in the Ballroom of the Students' Union.

In the sixth book of the Republic, Plato recounts the now-famous "Parable of the Ship". Although it is only a short anecdote, it teaches us a fundamental truth about politics and politicians.

According to Plato, this parable concerns a ship in which there is a captain who although taller and stronger than any of the crew, is a little deaf and has a slight infirmity in sight. His knowledge of navigation, Plato has to add, is rather meagre.

There are a number of sailors on this ship and they begin to quarrel among themselves as to who should steer. They all want to try their hand at steering and every one is of the opinion that he has the right to the job even though he has never learned the art of navigation. These sailors say that navigation cannot be taught and they are "ready to cut to pieces anyone who says the contrary".

All those ignorant sailors throng about the captain and beg him to allow them to do the steering. If they do not get the job and some others are preferred, they kill those others and throw them overboard. Finally, having succeeded in getting the captain drunk, they mutiny, take possession of the ship and make free with the stores. And in this fashion, eating and drinking, they proceed on their voyage without the slightest regard for the safety of the ship and its passengers.

As for the man who aids them in their plot of getting the ship out of the captain's hands into their own (by force or by persuasion), they compliment with the name of sailor, pilot or able seaman. As for the man who is the true pilot and who is the only one really qualified to steer the ship, they call him good-for-nothing and a star-gazer. The true pilot has mastered the art of navigation and has studied the seasons, stars and winds — but to the sailors he is only a dreamer, a pure theoretician.

The interpretation of this parable is quite straight forward. And yet, if we apply it to our own situation, we can learn an important lesson from Plato's thought.

The ship represents our Province of Quebec. The sailors who clamour for the right to steer the ship stand for the great mass of ignorant politicians who try and run our affairs in the Parliament. These men want to take control for their own benefit, without the slightest concern for the welfare of the people whom they are supposed to represent.

The majority of the politicians in power today believe, as did the sailors of Plato's parable, that the only way to learn to administer a Province (or a city or a country) is by getting elected and then actually governing. In other words, they seize power from the people, (who, like the ship's captain, are big and strong but dull and a bit short-sighted), and then learn to run the affairs of the state as best they can.

Yesterday, in the Union Ballroom, one of these sailors spoke to the students and tried to tell them that he had their interests at heart. He admitted that he had no formal training. In fact, he was rather proud that he had "worked up the hard way". But as much as we admire his climb to fame and fortune, we cannot agree with his theory that "common sense" is all you need to administer the Province of Quebec. (Although sometimes one would be happy to settle for a little of that).

These are the men who sit in our Parliament and decide on whether or not McGill should receive aid this year. These are the men who administer the public affairs of this Province. It is no wonder that the ship seems to be floundering.

From the Ivory Tower

Hanley and The Star

The Montreal Star has once again demonstrated its alarming lack of respect for common journalistic ethics and the simple truth. Resemblance between their account of the Frank Hanley burlesque show in the Union Ballroom yesterday afternoon and the actual meeting ends with the names of the principal participants and a few secondary details carefully solicited for Hanley's glorification.

It was the greatest comedy show McGill has seen in years. Shadow-boxing about the rostrum, Frank Hanley paraded his intelligence with the same thoroughness exhibited by Lady Godiva when she paraded her lily white hide way back when. But whereas Lady Godiva was well endowed by nature, Frank Hanley is not.

PLANNED ECONOMY

Gesticulating wildly and swinging the Chairman's gavel for emphasis, Hanley announced his revolutionary new discovery — the planned economy. He went on to denounce the fundamental tenet of our society, rule by law, in favour of rule by common sense (to be exclusively exercised by the Union Nationale in its infinite wisdom). Professors who left McGill for higher salaries elsewhere he termed "unpatriotic". Refusing to answer questions dealing with the financial situation of Quebec's universities on the grounds that he is not an expert on their administration, when asked to deliver a common-sense opinion (which he had previously strongly endorsed) Hanley claimed astounding ignorance of the whole education situation. All this and more.

present the trophy to the winning captain. The Ice Show begins at 10 pm, featuring skating champions Charles Snelling and Carole Jane Pahl; Doug Court; Christie Allen; and the McGill Chorus Line.

The West Point Glee Club and the Deep River Boys will star in the show and Jimmy Tapp will emcee.

The highlight of the evening will be the crowning of the carnival Queen.

Saturday's activities include the finals of the Debating Conference, the Carnival Revue, the close of the ski meet and the Carnival Ball.

This year's Carnival Revue features various college acts, including the West Point Glee Club, the Smithinpoofs from Smith College, a variety act from the University of Vermont, and acts from "Reign or Shine" and "My Fur Lady". There will be a show at 2 pm and 4 pm in Moyse Hall.

The climax of the Winter Carnival will be the Carnival Ball, held, as usual, in the Currie Gym. The famous Larry and Les Elgart group is the feature orchestra with Paul Beauregard acting as relief. The evening also consists of light entertainment in the B.W. and F. Room, and the presenting of prizes for snow sculpture.

By Ian Binnie
News Editor

Reporters from the Montreal Star were there, looked, listened, and departed. Newsmen were allegedly given hefty cash presents from the bustling press-conscious City Councillor. For a man who claims a salary of $7000 on which to live and run his political machine, Mr. Hanley must have an exceedingly intricate budget.

JUSTIFICATION

For the report appearing in the Star painted in heroic terms the sufferings of Mr. Hanley's constituents who yet did not begrudge paying taxes to help the university students. It spoke at length of Hanley's "fiery" oratory in which the fighting politician had upbraided the students for their demonstrations in the past two years. It concluded with a long and uneventful list of quoted figures which Hanley had used to stave off his angry audience.

The report failed to include the "big announcement" which Hanley had promised his audience, his "discovery" of the planned economy. His great belief in common-sense interpretations of the constitution was never mentioned, neither was his charge that professors who succumbed to higher salaries were "unpatriotic". The second point was finally mentioned in a later edition, buried beneath a deluge of unreadable statistics.

TERRIFYING SIGNIFICANCE

The terrifying significance of this history lies in the dishonest abuse of its power by the Montreal Star, an abuse which is calamitous in its result and knowing in its intent.

We live in a political system where we do not directly govern ourselves but do so through elected representatives. It is primarily through the press that we learn just what our representatives are doing and what they are thinking, their opinions and reactions to issues of the day. By slanting coverage and carefully selecting the facts it will report, the press perverts and destroys this necessary lifeline of communication and the political system by which we are governed crumbles.

As long as the press resembles the Montreal Star men like Frank

Hanley, the ex-boxer politician who earned a grade-four education and discovered the planned economy, will continue to be elected. And as long as they continue to be elected, our democracy will continue to rot, crumble, and collapse into demagoguery.

Tots Feast at Valentine Party Sponsored by McGill Union

"Let's do it again next year," was the general idea of the group of Cerebral Palsied children after the Valentines' party, sponsored by the Public Relations Committee of the McGill Union.

The party, held at the Montreal Children's Hospital on Feb. 11, was successfully carried out by members of the Public Relations Committee and guests of the committee from the Union Board of Managers.

The committee, under the co-chairmanship of Arlene Israel and Elizabeth Griffiths, provided sandwiches, ice-cream, and cake, showed movies and presented the children with presents.

MP Hanley Visits McGill To Give Hell To Students

The present economic situation especially concerns university students. "It will be too late to blame them, when they have deserted to go find some better paid work over the border, it shall be too late, when they have succumbed to leftist propaganda, and turned bitterly against an economy which has no place for them."

Hanley was not satisfied with the decisions of the student body. He condemned the students' going to the city council buildings to create disturbances, the tramway strike, and the petitioning of the provincial government for grants. He warned students to "be cautious of political leaders."

Defending the provincial government for its education politics, he had this to say: "The budget for education is the largest budget... in the entire province."

Hanley stated that any student could obtain funds for furthering his education in the province if his financial position warranted it. "Is there any student in this hall who has been refused a government grant to further his education?" he asked. To a student who replied that he had been turned down, Hanley replied that he had no idea why he had been refused and furthermore declared, "I do not believe you have even made a request or have been refused. There is no student who has applied for a grant who has not received a document saying why he has been refused."

Students' Society President Roy Heenan pointed out that anyone who could not afford college and did not receive assistance naturally was not attending McGill and so could not be in the room. Heenan also said that McGill was not receiving federal grants and provincial grants are one-quarter of those of Ontario.

"The man from St. Ann's" replied: "I meant to go back to Quebec and bring back the demands of the McGill student body. I do not know the figures of Ontario. It is not a problem for students if the professors are not receiving enough salaries."

Westmount Wins High School Cup In Debate Trials

The annual high school debating tournament, sponsored by the McGill Debating Union, took place yesterday at Westmount High School. The Eaton's Trophy went to Westmount High School, which debated the negative of the resolution "Canada Should Have a Codified Bill of Rights". The McGill University Debating Union Shield, presented to the best speaker in the tournament, was won by Ronald Cohen of Westmount High School.

Michael Stein, Chairman of the Public Service Programme, and J. J. Elkin, Hosts' Tournament Chairman, organized the tournament for the high schools. Fourteen teams debated for three rounds; the finalists, Adath Israel, affirmative, and Westmount, negative, were chosen from the scorecards of the following McGill Judges: Norman Spinner, Les Malcovitch, Irwin Cotler, Sam Gewurz, Barry Margulis, Alan Stein, Marcel Masse and Irwin Steinberg.

Wilfrid Hastings, Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Society, and Norman May, BCL 1, judged the final. The former presented the trophies on behalf of the McGill Debating Union.

Interview With Frank Hanley

"Friend Of The Student"

by ALLAN SHIACH and MORRIS FISH

After an arduous panel debate, Frank Hanley, City Councillor, Member of the Quebec Legislature, and "friend of the student" adjourned to the "Shrine". While his sundry followers sat discussing at the further end of the bar, Mr. Hanley offered to answer our questions in another corner of the room.

"I don't know anything about Universities," said Mr. Hanley. He glanced aside rapidly to see if he had been overheard. He ordered more drinks and smiled approvingly at his statement.

"What, sir," we asked "do you have to say on the ends and effects of the student strike last year?"

"Gee, I dunno. What was the strike about?"

We explained carefully, and Mr. Hanley eventually decided that he didn't consider the strike a "good thing".

"I want to go back to Quebec" he volunteered, "And be able to stand up for you guys when anyone tries to criticize you".

We thanked him.

"The Editor of Midnight recently wrote some amazing stories about McGill," we informed him, "What do you have to say about the newspaper and its editor — Joe Azaria?"

"Jeez, I don't want to get in wrong with Joe!" he laughed. We let the question lie.

ROUND THREE

He ordered some more drinks all round, slipped his secretary an unspecified amount, and paid one of his henchmen.

You must find living on your $7,000 salary difficult, sir. Do you have any other financial backing for your career in politics?"

"No. I own a little service station, but that don't make too much. I live a very quiet life you know."

He paid for all the drinks, added that he was in favour of legalized gambling, and smiled broadly.

"It was suggested by an important man in local affairs that Jean Drapeau — the ex-mayor — had succeeded in spreading Vice around this city. Do you think this a fair judgment of the man?"

"I'd better not answer that, or I'll be sued for libel."

He sipped his cognac gently; then gulped, listening to the next question: "Tram fares for students. Should we be given reductions?"

"Well," he said, sticking his chin out, "I'm going to stick my neck out on this. I think that students at every level should get reduced tram fares. If you wanna present a brief to me, I'll study it and present it to the local authorities."

Five heavily-built, white tied, black shirted men guffawed in the corner bar. Mr. Hanley glanced over to them quickly.

"I would like to say," he continued unprompted, "That today has been the most interesting day in my twenty years of political life. Never have I been to a meeting that was conducted with such order and good behaviour!"

PIGS LEGS

We concurred mildly, deciding to avoid further important political issues as this.

"What, sir, is your favourite food?"

"I guess that's Pigs Legs," he replied.

"And your favourite author?"

"Fitz, in the Gazette," he said immediately. "I think that the Gazette and the Star are good newspapers. Their editorials? They're good and strong editorials. Free speech, that's what we have in this Province," he added.

Returning to the controversial issue of Midnight, we asked him what he thought of the objectivity and research that went into producing a headline recently: "McGill Girls Tops In Sex!"

"Well, they're certainly tops in beauty — they may not be tops in sex. I haven't had any experience. But I'm willing to find out!"

Midnight was again dropped from the agenda. But considering him to be an experienced man in the field of politics, we decided to ask his guidance on wider political issues.

"What," we inquired, "Do you think of the American foreign policy?"

"I think you might say that it's... well... it's er... it's cancerous!"

JEWISH POPE?

He didn't seem to know who the American Presidential Assistant was, so we furthered the subject no more. Politics seemed exhausted, we turned finally to religion.

"How about having a Jewish Pope next time?"

"Well, that's O.K. But I'd like to see a list of the candidates first." He didn't like the idea of having a city councillor as Pope.

Mr. Hanley has lived for fifty years. He has had an interesting and stimulating life ("Do you believe in re-incarnation?" "What's that? Anyways I wouldn't mind living my life again!"). His advice to all students and the younger generation today is summed up in his own words:

"Never forget the people who didn't have the same opportunities as you have had — or something like that."

His effusive thanks having been tendered, he left to join his comrades at the other end of the room.

Lyons' Roar Tames Redmen As 'Y' Wins

by Irving Fish
Sports Editor

Any resemblance between the performance of the McGill Redmen basketball team that defeated the McMaster Marauders on Friday night, and the McGill Redmen last night is purely coincidental. Sparked by the brilliant playing of Larry Lyons, the Davis 'Y' completely overwhelmed the Redmen 94-68, to take a commanding 26 point lead in the two-game total point series in the Montreal Basketball League semi-finals, in a game played at the tiny Mount Royal Street gymnasium last night.

Lyons was the whole show as he set a new MBL scoring record by potting 43 points in the game. The speedy forward found the small court to his liking as he hit for points from the outside, in driving layups, and from the foul line.

Swimmers Earn Split; Pound Stars

The McGill swimming team came out with a split of the honours in two weekend meets.

The University of Toronto beat the Redmen 61-25 on Saturday at Kingston. The 200-yards butterfly and the 440-yards free style were won for Varsity by Olympic champion Bill Yorzyk. Yorzyk edged out Cameron Grout of McGill in the latter event.

Friday night McGill earned 50 points when they defeated the University of New Brunswick and College Militaire Royale at St. Johns. UNB and CMR obtained 32 and 12 points respectively.

For the Redmen, Richard Pound was the star. He won the 100, 220 and 440 yards free style at St. Johns. At Kingston he won the 220 yards free style. Cameron Grout, another leading swimmer for the Redmen, won the 50 yards free style and the 200 yards butterfly at St. Johns as well as the 50 yards free style at Kingston.

Women Lose At Volleyball Meet

McGill was on the wrong end of a winning streak week-end at the girls' volleyball meet in Toronto. The first place team, after two day's play, was Western while McGill came a weak last.

On Friday night the McGill team faced McMaster, Toronto and Queens. Their round against McMaster went into overtime since the one extra point McGill held was not sufficient for a win which requires a two point lead. After a five minute see-saw battle, the McGillians were defeated 20-18.

Their second match saw a rather confused attempt by the Red and White at re-organization. The Toronto team won 22-6, the largest score McGill allowed during the meet.

The McGillians turned out a surprising performance against the much-vaunted Queens, losing again by that all important two points.

On Saturday morning two rounds were played against OAC and Western. The OAC match resulted in a disappointing loss for the Red and White.

Against powerful Western, however, the McGill team turned in a very creditable performance. They started the game with a surprising 4-1 lead; but then the Western offensive tightened up and McGill went down in a final defeat.

The Redmen, on the other hand, could not get untracked in the little court. Time after time they bumped into each other, threw offside passes, and overshot the basket. As a matter of fact the McGillians had their worst shooting average of the season. The fast break, which the Redmen have used successfully for the past few games, was useless on the short court. In plain English, this just wasn't their night.

McGill matched baskets with the Blues for the first ten minutes of the game, but two quick baskets by Lyons put the 'Y' ahead by five points and they never looked back. The half time score was 43-34 in favour of the Blues. Davis opened the second half with ten unanswered points, and it was curtains for the Redmen.

The McGill players made the mistake of getting mad at themselves in the second half, and the harder they tried to snap out of their slump, the more hard luck they seemed to encounter. Coach Ron Sharpe substituted his charges frequently and tried every combination possible in order to try to put together a potent scoring attack which, at the same time could hold the deadly Lyons at bay. None were too successful.

Even Johnny Finch, who has not seen the bench since the beginning of the year, asked to be taken off the court in the second half. Best man on the floor for the Redmen was Tom Richards. The six foot four inch Ontarioan controlled both the backboards with his fine rebounding. In addition he chipped in with ten points. Cal Cooper and Gary Ulrich shared scoring honours for McGill with 14 points apiece, while Finch hit for eleven.

For the Blues Larry Lyons was the whole show. His shooting was deadly and he even played well defensively at times in the second half.

Ruby Goodman, who scored 13 points, and Ben Vogel, who scored 12, also turned in adequate games for the 'Y'.

The second game of the series, originally scheduled for Wednesday night, was cancelled until sometime next week. It will be played at the Sir Arthur Currie Gymnasium.

The Quebec Steelers looked sluggish as they defeated the Loyola Warriors by only ten points in the opener of their series.

Reds End Season In Tie For First

The McGill Reds wound up their WOBL schedule on a sour note, losing to the "Y" 50-40 on the "Y" 's home grounds. As a result of their win, the "Y" moved into a tie for first place with the Reds. Only one more game remains to be played in WOBL — a "Y" — Mac encounter. A "Y" win would mean the title for them; a Mac victory would force a three — way tie for the league leadership.

Nothing seemed to go right for the Reds in the first quarter as the "Y" jumped off to an 18-3 lead. Second quarter action saw the Reds narrow the gap to a 23-20 score and the McGillians were back in the ball game. Coming back with some tremendous basketball in the third quarter the Reds overpowered the "Y" but immediately blew their small advantage. Final count — "Y" 50, McGill Reds 40.

Di Barra racked up a phenomenal total of 24 points to lead the "Y" to their crucial win over the Reds. Sally Sadler again turned in an outstanding performance for McGill, counting thirteen points, while Corrie Oomen scored 9.

The officiating at times was highly questionable. Four McGill players fouled out and as a result the visitors finished the contest with a paltry six. Tonight the WOBL schedule comes to an end with the "Y" meeting Mac in that all important game.

SQUASHETTES BREAK JINX

For the first time in six years the McGill squashettes tied the MAAA for first place in squash competition. In a round robin tournament played recently McGill and the MAAA each accumulated 5 points while the Montreal Badminton and Squash Club won twice.

Timothy Gibbon turned in the best performance for McGill by sweeping both of her matches.

First seeded McGill player Ann McNally won one and lost one while Faye Witherell, a member of last year's team also managed to win one out of two.

The winning effort on the part of the McGill coeds was remarkable from the fact that the MAAA selected their team from over 30 top players while the McGill contingent had little choice.

Two more tournaments are slated for McGill in the near future and the outlook for the squashettes is extremely bright after their great showing in this meet.
